

HEAR ARGUMENTS ON EXCEPTIONS FILED IN SUIT

Hilltown Township Taxpayers' Case Again Aired in Court

REVIEW SOME POINTS

Judge Knight, Montgomery County, Sits With Judge Shull in Case

Hearing of arguments on the exceptions to the opinion filed by Judge Samuel E. Shull, Stroudsburg, in the recent equity case between the School Board and the Taxpayers' Association of Hilltown Township were held Friday at Doylestown.

The addition of another jurist from Montgomery county, Judge Harold G. Knight, was necessary. Equity arguments are heard before one Judge and after the argument that Judge files an opinion, but when exceptions are filed, as they were in this case by the Hilltown Taxpayers' Association's representative, then the argument, according to law, must be heard before two Judges.

Boiled down, counsel for the protesting Hilltown township taxpayers, who started action many months ago against the Hilltown township school board, argued before Judges Shull and Knight, his contention "that the Act of 1929 which authorizes all matters of dispute as to municipal increases by school bond issues, are for the Dauphin County Court to decide," is unconstitutional.

In a recent opinion handed down in the case, Judge Shull ruled that Bucks county had no jurisdiction in the case, and then the exceptions were filed.

The equity proceeding seeks to retain the Hilltown township school directors from issuing bonds for the erection of a new school building.

Mark Thatcher, of Perkasie, attorney for the school board, argued at length that his opponent was incorrect in his contention as to the Act of 1929; that the act was constitutional and that the Bucks county court had nothing to do with the dispute at this time. Mr. Thatcher further argued that if the Act were unconstitutional the increase of indebtedness of Hilltown township for the purpose of erecting a new consolidated school, is lawful because the necessary papers filed in that interest, are in proper shape in the office of the Quarter Sessions Court of Bucks county.

After two hours of argument, the case was continued until next Monday morning.

Both taxpayers and school directors have been preparing to defend themselves. Two hundred Hilltown township residents were in court.

Two separate decisions have been handed down by Judge Shull, who has been hearing the various phases of the Hilltown litigation. The first was one granting the injunction against the directors, and the second, a few weeks ago, was a partial reversal of the first.

In Judge Shull decided that the bond issue was legal, and that the directors might proceed after changing certain phases of the specifications which "laid the board open to possible fraud" and re-advertising for bids.

In an argument speech to show he had the interest of the taxpayers at heart, Attorney Harry E. Grim pointed out the taxpayers were more opposed to indebtedness today than several years ago. "Today the burden of building a new school house costing $110,000, would mean more to us than any time in the past," he contended.

Mr. Grim pointed out that Judge Shull, in a former ruling, maintained the election as conducted by the School Board was not held properly and according to law. He also attacked the validity of the records filed in the Quarter Sessions.

"The courts are not prone to decide any more than they have to," stated Judge Knight, the visiting jurist.

"The question here is the right of property as contemplated by the constitution, and all the claimant has lost in his right to test the validity of the action of the School Board," Mr. Thatcher argued.

CONFESSES TO KILLING

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 21.—Grilled for several hours following his surrender, Clarence Beam, 21, Phillipsburg, N. J., an escaped inmate of the New Lisbon Colony for Feeble Minded in Burlington County, confessed today, police said, to causing the death of a gas station attendant on the Lawrenceville road near here last night during a hold-up.

The victim, Charles Kierstein, 38, was struck over the head with a blunt object while attending the gas station on the outskirts of the city. He was robbed of $35. Rushed to McKinley Hospital, Kierstein died three hours later.

Meanwhile, Beam, police said, entered the police station and surrendered. He said he was wanted in connection with a fur robbery in Chicago. A pistol was found in his possession, according to police.

Several hours of grilling followed with Beam confessing to the hold-up and murder of Kierstein, police asserted. "I needed the money because I was taking a trip," Beam told police. No money was found on him, however, police said. Larry Weinthrob, 19, and Abe Rosen, 16, both of New York City, are being held as possible accomplices.

EXPECT SHIPPING TO RENEW ACTIVITY

Edgar F. Luckenbach, Thinks
"Better Feeling Exists
All Around"

CONDITIONS IMPROVED

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(INS)—Discussing the business situation in his office overlooking New York harbor, Edgar F. Luckenbach, one of America's foremost ship owners and president of the Luckenbach Lines, said today that "a better feeling exists all around."

Luckenbach said that in his opinion the legalization of light wines and beer by Congress would "materially help" business conditions in the country. He smilingly described himself as "wringing wet."

If the California wineries begin to ship their product, as in pre-prohibition days, the Luckenbach Lines, which are engaged in intercoastal trade, will benefit, as will other steamship companies. Commenting on this angle of prospective business, Luckenbach said:

"We used to carry thousands of barrels of wine in the old days before the Volstead act was put into effect. Thousands of tons of hops, malt and barley were shipped in those days from California ports to New York. That business has ceased since prohibition."

Luckenbach said that just prior to the recent national election his company found conditions improved over the same period a year ago.

In Luckenbach's opinion the out-merchant marine is this:

"Ship owners need a moratorium of at least three years to enable them to make enough money to pay the mortgage and interest owed to the United States Government. We are much in the same position as the farmer who has mortgages on his property which exceed the value of the property today. Mortgages keep them poor. We haven't been able to expand as we would like to. There has been no construction of freight ships since the war."

Capacity Crowd Attends November Session at Trevoise

PRIZES ARE AWARDED

TREVOISE, Nov. 21.—During the business session of the Trevoise Horticultural Society which was attended by a capacity audience of more than 250 persons in the community house here Tuesday evening eight new members were welcomed.

Several reports were given. Mrs. Hugh Graham, chairman of the roadside planting committee, gave her report as did also Mrs. George Purdy, Bethayres, chairman of the program committee.

Featuring the meeting was a large display of garden chrysanthemums. Three prizes were given for the displays as follows: First, bouquet containing 11 varieties, Miss Eunice Williams, Bristol; second, Mrs. Helen Illick, Hulmeville, and third, Mrs. Van Wavren, Fox Chase.

The speaker was Eugene H. Mitchell, superintendent of a seed firm in Philadelphia, who gave a talk on garden chrysanthemums. The origin of these flowers, he said, has been traced back for many years. He explained that this flower needs little protection, but thrives better in a well drained soil. He explained the type of fertilizer to be used in the cultivation of the chrysanthemum and explained when it is best to cut back the plants. The object of cutting back the plant, said Mr. Mitchell, is to produce larger blooms and long, straggly stems.

CAGE LEAGUE OPENS SEASON HERE TONIGHT

Knights of Columbus Will Play Bristol Aces in Opening Tilt

EIGHT - TEAM CIRCUIT

"Dave" Landreth, well-known sports figure of Bristol and president of the Bristol Twilight Baseball League, will officially open the Bristol Basketball League in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall, Wood street and Lincoln avenue, tonight when he makes the first toss-up in the game between the Knights of Columbus and the Bristol Aces.

The opening of the eight team circuit will mark a new era in the basketball history of this borough which was dropped three years ago. At that time almost the same teams that are in the league now were members of the circuit then.

The Italian Mutual Aid Hall is the same place which saw the best basketball players in the East perform in the days of the cage playing. At that time the Mutual Aid Hall was called the Bristol Theatre. The Mutual Aid floor has been remodeled and now is one of the best courts in this locality and capable of seating close to three hundred patrons. Accommodations are also listed for the ladies and it is expected that many of the fans in tonight's opening will be of the opposite sex.

Followers of the teams that play tonight are predicting victories for their clubs and close games are anticipated. The Bristol Aces are composed of former Bristol High players and contain four of Coach Townsend's last year's varsity men. Pico and Britton are the guards, with Cole and Borne, forwards. Tullio will jump center. The line-up of the Aces is not known and Manager, Ed. McIlvaine says the fans will see a fast quintet in action.

There has been a little change in the schedule of the loop. Instead of the second game being Thursday night which is Thanksgiving Night the date has been changed to Friday night. The Hibernians will meet the Odd Fellows and the Paterson Parchment Paper Company will play the Hawks on that date.

The tap-off for tonight's game is scheduled for eight o'clock sharp. The doors of the Mutual Aid Hall will be thrown open at 7.30.

FOR NEW KIND OF "ART" DEPRESSION RESPONSIBLE

(By "The Stroller")

That that good old American spirit will help the people of the country to weather this storm of "hard times" is shown in the manner by which hundreds are making "something out of nothing."

A new form of "depression plant" has blossomed. No, it isn't the one formed of a clinker, blueing, salt, and water, plus some tooth-picks or matchsticks. The "seeds" and "water" of this plant are a tin can and some crepe paper, and the implement is a pair of scissors.

Method of culture is here given: First, secure a coffee can (there is one certain variety of coffee can suggested, as it does not rust or tarnish, but retains its silvery brightness); using the seam of the can as the "backbone" of the plant, strips about one-quarter inch wide are cut around the tin from one side of the seam to the other with the scissors; these strips are then twisted, and form the stems for crepe paper flowers which are attached to the end. The "plant" is quite a firm affair, with the bottom of the can used as a base.

And some call it "Tin Can Art."

GATHER AT EDDINGTON FOR A GUILD EXHIBIT

Mrs. W. Ketchum and Miss
Isabell Jones Are Speakers

HAVE A LARGE DISPLAY

EDDINGTON, Nov. 21.—Showing keen interest in the work of the Cornwells Branch of the Needlework Guild of America, a goodly number gathered in the Presbyterian Church House here, during a heavy shower Saturday afternoon to witness the exhibit of garments, and hear speeches pertaining to guild work.

Mrs. Frank A. Simons, president of the organization, was in charge of the meeting, and introduced the speakers for the 28th annual exhibit.

Miss Isabell Jones, who conducts the Labrador work of the branch, told of the difficulties overcome in Labrador, and how fresh fruits and vegetables are being secured for the hospital and orphanage at St. Anthony's, through untiring efforts of those interested in the people of that section. It was mentioned that the people of Labrador received little pay for their fish last year, and consequently the need of help from the Needlework Guild is great.

The second speaker was Mrs. W. Ketchum, founder of the Kensington Neighborhood House and Soup Kitchen. "I look upon the Needlework Guild as a dream that has come true," she stated. She told of the founding of the Port Richmond Soup Kitchen by her father-in-law, and her pledge to him as he was dying that she would do all she could to help carry on.

"The more you do of such work the more interested you are," Mrs. Ketchum added, as she continued to tell of her endeavor to "carry on" the project. "I've felt that obligation through the years." The soup kitchen was moved to the center of Kensington some years ago when Mrs. Ketchum founded that center. "But we knew the men needed something beside soup and bread. They needed the Bread of Life. So we started a Sunday School

PAIR HELD UP AND ROBBED AT GUN POINT

Trio of Desperadoes Get Approximately $7.50 from Couple

SECOND WITHIN WEEK

The second hold-up to occur in this vicinity within a week, happened Saturday evening at 10 o'clock, when three young men, each armed, held up and robbed Harold H. Haefer, Hulmeville, and Miss Rae Harbury, Tacony, in Bensalem Township.

The trio, all young men, described as dapperly dressed, and hatless, relieved their victims of approximately $7.50, then used their sedan for a getaway and abandoned the machine about a half mile from the scene of the hold-up.

Constable Orville Morris, Hulmeville, who was cruising about the territory, happened along a few minutes later, and picked up the two who had been robbed. Haefer's machine was found a short distance away. This car was noticed by Morris when manned by the trio as it sped past him; then a short distance beyond he saw the two who had been held up and heard the story. After locating the stolen machine, through one window of which one of the armed men crashed a revolver and gave the order to "Stick 'em up," Morris and his party searched the roads of that vicinity for a trace of the three desperadoes. It is presumed the trio had a car parked nearby which they transferred to, and made a getaway. The affair was reported to the State Police.

In a hold up just a week ago a Philadelphia taxicab driver, Max Miller, 3308 W. Haggart street, found himself the victim when after driving two men from Jasper and Ontario streets, Philadelphia, to a point on the Newportville Road, near Croydon, he was ordered to leave the taxi when it was found he had no money with him. The pair drove off in the machine. It was stated by Miller at the time that when he inquired the destination of the two they did not know just where they wanted to go.

Miller described the pair as being very young, one about 20 and the second younger. The trio staging the hold-up Saturday night is also described as being young.

Officers are of the opinion this section is being used for such purposes by young men from nearby cities, preying upon motorists as a means of securing "easy" cash.

SON, INSANE, MAKES VICIOUS ATTACK ON MOTHER WITH KNIFE

John Holden Slashes Parent's Hand and Wrist With Knife

DRAGS HER TO STREET

Then Runs to Home of His Sister and Tells of Attack

A son mentally deranged made a vicious attack on his mother this morning while she was holding a grandchild in her arms.

Mrs. John Holden, 260 McKinley street, was cut about the hands and arms by her son, John, 38, as she walked the floor of her room nursing a grandchild.

Holden, it is stated, ordered his mother to "put down that baby." When she did not respond immediately Holden is alleged to have grabbed a butcher knife and slashed his mother's left hand and wrist. Two fingers are very severely cut and narrowly escaped being severed from the hand.

Mrs. Holden then put the infant down and ran from the house but was again attacked by her son, who attempted to grab and tear at her face.

A sister, Vera, grabbed a pot of hot soup from the stove and threw it at her brother, driving him from the house. Holden ran to the home of another sister at 331 Jackson street, where he threw a stone against the door and informed his sister, Margaret, "I've just killed Mom."

Police were called and Chief Jones and Constable Thomas Crawford responded, going to different directions to capture the maniac. Crawford met Holden first and placed him under arrest.

Holden, upon being arrested asked Crawford to loan him his overcoat. "Don't let 'mom' see the blood on my hands, or she will think I have been hurt," he told Crawford. He was greatly disturbed over the fact that the sight of the blood might cause his mother to be frightened.

Holden was home from Fort Sloum, N. Y., on a furlough until November 25th, when he was to report back to the Army to go to Panama. He is a member of Company L, 18th Regiment. He has been in the Army about nine years.

Police will detain Holden until his mental capacity is determined. "They believe that he was temporarily insane."

WAR DEBTS AGAIN

With another due day on the war debts only three weeks away London is genuinely hopeful of winning over, before that time, the American people to a new settlement plan which will avert the necessity for a default and at the same time will relieve the debtors of making payment, at least in full.

None of the principal European debtors has asked for more grace, although all will find it hard to meet the payments on time and none wants a default to be registered against it. Therefore the European request for the reopening of the debt before December 15.

If it is true that the British government is counting on educating British and American opinion on a new debt policy in the month that remains, the optimism of that government is to be admired. Those two opinions are now as far apart as the two poles, the British taxpayer feeling that he can pay nothing on the war debts and the equally hard-up American taxpayer feeling that he must have more, instead of less, from his foreign debtors.

Why don't the war debtors have a little heart-to-heart talk with the holders of Liberty and Victory bonds? If the latter will cancel Uncle Sam's debt to them, the American taxpayers, who must redeem these bonds if the foreign borrowers do not, will gladly cancel the war debts. Moreover, if all countries would repudiate all war bonds there could be no more wars except by the conscription of capital, and the men who start wars would never stand for that.

INDIRECT TAXATION

Perhaps the greatest evil of indirect taxation is its tendency to lull the taxpayers into indifference toward government waste and extravagance and to encourage both, for the poor deluded taxpayer is blind to every tax that isn't taken out of his very hand in cold cash. Makers of taxes serve two masters, the taxpayer and the tax spender, and the most insistent gets the most service unless he is easily duped.

Why are income taxes, property taxes, poll taxes and gasoline taxes unpopular? Because they come directly from the lean and hungry purse of John Smith, taxpayer. If gasoline vendors would cease advertising price plus tax on their pumps, the great American public would shortly forget that the high price of gasoline is largely tax.

So the wily veteran of legislative life is turning to levies like the sales tax which extract the most revenue with the least pain. He is lulling the tax spenders, who demand more money in exchange for their votes, and the taxpayers, who demand tax reduction or no taxes. Somebody must be stabbed in the back.

Direct taxation bringing bluntly up against the top-heavy cost of government is the shortest and surest route to government economy and tax reduction. The unseen levy is the most difficult to shed. Prosperity will return to the crest of a wave of public economy and retrenchment.

You can't tell if money makes fools or if fools make money.

Modern girls may not get red when they kiss, but the men do.

MEADOWBROOK COUPLE FORCED TO LEAVE THEIR PALATIAL RESIDENCE, UTILIZE BUILDINGS ON A FARM ALONG NESHAMINY CREEK IN BUCKS COUNTY

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer K. Mulford, Jr., Bring Novel Idea Into Play — Adopt Progressive System for Sleeping, Dining, Bathing, Etc.

In last Sunday's issue of the Philadelphia Public Ledger an account of the manner in which Mr. and Mrs. Spencer K. Mulford, Jr., are utilizing buildings on a Bucks County farm during this time of depression, was given. The article follows:

Live in one house, dine in another and sleep in a third — such is the unique plan evolved by the Spencer K. Mulford Jr. in their novel way of solving a problem created by the depression.

When it comes to devising ways and means of coping with domestic economy, here's another case of "hats off" to a woman. Presidents and Mayors seeking fine points for their retrenchment programs might get a bright idea or two from Mrs. Mulford, to whom credit is given by her husband for their new housing plan out along Neshaminy Creek.

Not so long ago Mr. Mulford, a member of the firm of H. K. Mulford & Co., manufacturing chemists, felt the sting of depression. He admits being hit so hard that he had to move out of his palatial home at Meadowbrook and take up permanent residence on a farm in Bucks County where formerly he had been wont to visit over weekends.

The country seat, comprising many hundreds of acres of farm land, together with miles and miles of good riding turf, was far from being the kind of place where the Mulfords felt they could spend all their remaining days. It lacked, among other things, conveniences to which city and suburban dwellers have been accustomed. But chiefly it lacked adequate sleeping quarters.

The original farmhouse, over 200 years old and recognized as one of the most ancient dwellings in this section of the country, was large enough for a gathering of home lovers after a day's ride. It had been used by the master and his wife as a retreat over night, without benefit of servants. But when it came to being occupied day in and day out as the permanent dwelling place of the Mulfords, something had to be done about it.

Not only did something have to be done about it, but it was fairly advisable that whatever was done must be done with the least possible financial outlay. Mrs. Mulford rose to the occasion.

The Mulfords were faced with a singular problem. They owned more land than they could gaze over in its entirety without straining the eyesight. Their farmers were comfortably housed, even luxuriously accommodated. Their saddle mounts and hunters were handsomely stabled and their prize shepherd dogs were magnificently sheltered and extremely well fed. Their servants were cared for in commodious quarters and their motorcars well garaged. But, in the midst of this excess of land and this wealth of quarters for attaches of the household, there was actually no place for the master.

The problem was solved by an adaptation of the progressive dinner system. Active by nature and fond of moving about, the Mulfords now sleep in one building, dine in another and bathe in still another. Their meals are served in the old farmhouse, where guests are entertained; ablutions are performed in elegant quarters above the stable, and sleeping is done in a stone bungalow built by Mrs. Mulford expressly for the purpose.

Slightly less than a year ago a site high on a hilltop, behind the farmhouse, was chosen for the future sleeping quarters of the Mulfords.

There were about the farm several work horses rapidly growing soft from lack of exercise. There were, too, any number of old houses in the vicinity whose owners were anxious to get rid of odds and ends of woodwork. At the edge of the lawn the Neshaminy flowed, its normally shallow waters running idly over a wealth of rough uncut stone, most suitable for building construction.

It is a matter of pardonable pride with Mrs. Mulford that she killed four birds with one stone. She exercised the horses, rid the old houses of ancient millwork, deepened the Neshaminy by removing several tons of building stone and constructed a sleeping house that puts to shame the best efforts of the dude ranch operators.

During the month of construction on the sleeping house, Mrs. Mulford visited the city dump here, got cast-off gravestones and tomb markers from sundry abandoned cemeteries, frisked a junked hearse of its lamps and assembled her materials. For the heavier stone work on the house she enlisted the aid of her stable boy, a lad with some experience in masonry.

As an architect Mrs. Mulford was nothing if not original. Yet her building is a model of perfection, judged from any standards. Possessing herself of a rare old leaded glass window, she caused a wall to be built around the piece. Stones from the Neshaminy were pressed into service for the job, hewn by the stable boy. She matched the window with another, the gift of a junk dealer.

With grave slabs she constructed a terrace for the house, considerably turning the epitaphs under. A stone settee on the terrace is supported by monuments which marked the final resting place of a Philadelphia couple who died here twenty-five years ago at the age of 83. The terrace is protected by granite grave lot markers. The old hearse lights are in position on either side of the door.

Feeling the necessity of providing adequate quarters where she and her husband might dress in comfort on winter mornings, the builder added to the semisleeping porch an adjoining room, now paneled in oak of a type pointed to with pride by the descendants of early English castle builders.

Presented with the problem of correctly fitting the odd assortment of oak pieces obtained for the purpose, a carpenter, the only craftsman gainfully employed in construction of the house, wilted in despair. By sand blasting, planing and other processes, however, the woodwork was made uniform and provided the Mulfords with one of the finest paneled rooms known to builders or decorators.

Pieces of old doors were made into built-in cabinets and converted into closets. In the sleeping porch itself the bed is supported on oak panels taken from doors in a house near

Washington Crossing, now well into from weather conditions in the some-over domestic problems. its third century. An air-filled rubber what open room. mattress prevents possible annoyance! Today the Mulfords worry no more

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LXVI.

THE old man turned from her to Ralph and back again without a flicker of expression on his thin, hawk-like face. He pulled on his moustache.

Ralph's jaw dropped. "You don't want to get married? You're turning me down? My God, Daphne—you're—you're failing me now? When I trusted you, I depended on you. Oh my God!" He began to walk up and down distractedly. "She did promise!" he whined. "I didn't tell you any lie, Mr. Greely! She did—she did!"

His breath came brokenly, his face was convulsed. Daphne was suddenly terribly afraid. Afraid he would break down, before pitiless Mr. Greely.

"Yes, I promised," she said, and came and stood beside him, her hands on his arm.

Instantly he was the old Ralph, triumphant. He gathered her to him, possessively. "There! What did I tell you?" he cried. "Didn't I say she was crazy about me? Say, when a girl is willing to marry on two hundred and fifty these days she's in love!"

The old man watched impassively. He had nothing to say.

Ralph seemed unconscious alike of the old man's silence, and Daphne's frozen quiet. While he was extravagantly kissing her hands, and murmuring brokenly to her, the phone rang.

"Hello!" Greely growled. "This is Miss Gurney." Crystal's voice came sweetly over the wire. "You don't know me, and I wouldn't bother you if it weren't frightfully necessary. Mr. Greely, I'm Ralph McKevitt's friend, and I know you know him so well—he's spoken so beautifully of you so often—and there's a matter of importance—could you tell me where I can get him? I've tried and tried his house—"

"Hold on—hold on—right here," the old man said, and then to Ralph, "I hate to interrupt you, but there's another lady—"

Ralph answered nervously. "Yes. All right. . . . In a few moments."

He turned to the two who were listening. "It's something unexpected. Will you excuse me? I'll be right back—"

When he had gone Daphne gathered up her notebook and pencils and turned to go, too. But her wobbly knees failed her. They wouldn't hold her up. With a little despairing cry she sank into the chair and wept.

"Oh, he'll come back, Greely murmured excitedly.

"That's why I'm crying," Daphne sobbed. "Because he will—and you can't go back on a man when he's down—you taught me that yourself!"

"Something awful has happened!" Crystal told Ralph over the telephone. "They've found out about us! This janitor saw you going out that morning—they're going to put me out—you've got to come! Come quick!"

Of course this thing had to come up now. Just when he had declared his engagement to Daphne. He had thought he would save him from the penitentiary. Greely would never send him up if it would hurt Daphne, she thought too much of her for that. "Too damn much," he thought, remembering the "new dear" and the incident of the car. And Daphne had said she didn't want to get married.

Afraid she would lose her hold on Greely no doubt.

"She's crazy about me, all right," he told himself grimly, driving up the hill to Crystal's apartment, "but I'm going to have to keep an eye on her. I won't have any wife of mine cheating on me. Greely can put that in his pipe and smoke it. And that pup Winters too. He needn't pull any 'holier-than-thou' stuff with me either. This business isn't all cleared up yet."

"If he didn't have pretty damn good reasons for clearing out when he did, he wouldn't have. Just let them wait a while. They'll find out that Ralph Iverson McKevitt isn't down and out yet. Greely better pull in his horns too, or I'll spill a few things I know on him. I could get him ruled out of the Bar Association. I guess he's afraid of me, or he wouldn't have backed down and given me the chance as salesman."

"If he dared bring this thing out in court he'd have done his damndest to send me to jail all right. It's where he'd like to see me. Friendship for my father, bah! I'm not my father! He never did intend to send me up. If I hadn't lost my head like a fool and dragged Daphne in, I wouldn't have had to marry her. I'd have been safe enough without her—what'll I do about Crystal? The only true friend I ever had! Her heart'll break when she hears about Daphne—"

He was still wondering how he would ever tell her, when he parked at her door and hurried on up the stairs.

He was out of breath and trembling with emotion when he gained the inner door and rapped—the old signal.

He thought he heard the sound of sobbing inside. A monotonous tired weeping.

When he had signalled twice without an answer, he turned the knob and entered. "Crystal," she lay face downward on the wide davenport, her bright gold head buried in a mound of silk cushions. Jade green. Cerise. Mustard color. A black and gold kimono slipped from one rounded shoulder. Her flesh was like satin incredibly soft and smooth.

He put his hands in his pocket and cleared his throat. "This is a fine time to send for me, Crystal! And at Greely's office, too—"

What'll he think? As if I didn't have troubles enough of my own right now. . . . Well, you haven't told me what's the matter? Now that I'm here you might as well tell me. . . . Come on, out with it!"

He hated himself for being so stern with her. . . . poor girl, with no one to turn to but him. He had his course mapped out. He would have to go on with it.

Crystal wiped her eyes and sat up. She looked at him without a trace of resentment in her round lovely face. "You're angry with me," she said softly. "I don't blame you. It was wrong of me to call you. I—I got panicky, that is all. I thought I couldn't go without saying goodbye. I had to see you—just once—"

"You're going away. . . . Good thing of course. . . . He breathed more easily. . . . And yet. . . . and yet."

She lifted her hands to brush

FOOT HEALTH ARCH SUPPORT

—by—
WILLIAM A. GROFF

Foot Specialist 329 Radcliffe St.

The time will come and must come, when the law must become cognizant of the facts that a metal arch support grips the surface of the sole or the plantar surface of the foot and presses upon the underlying structures. At every step, it acts as a clamp-splint and does not allow the muscles to act; they cannot functionate, and thus atrophy. The parts are clamped and locked so that the muscles can neither expand nor contract in any direction. In this way, the muscles involved waste away from disuse. The only use that a metal arch support has is when an individual's arches have fallen from an exceedingly overweight, and then only as a last resort. Any individual who follows a reputable foot specialist's advice, will not have to be troubled with metal arch supports, which not only distorts the shape of the shoe and produces callous upon the sole of the foot, but tires the individual upon walking a considerable distance. A notable orthopedic surgeon of New York recently said, "Give me a healthy individual with a perfect and normal arch, and within nine months he will have flat feet from wearing metal arch supports."—(Adv.)

ST. ANN'S ELEVEN IS VICTOR IN SUNDAY TILT

Before one of the largest crowds of the season, St. Ann's A. A. won its fourth game of the season on Sullivan's field yesterday afternoon defeating the strong Roxborough A. A., 13-6.

Two twenty-five yard runs, one by Ray Pieo and the other by "Dick" Seneca scored "Saints" touchdowns. Captain Pieo's run came in the first quarter after Conti had blocked a punt and put the ball on the twenty-five yard line. A line play by Missera failed to net anything but on the next play, Pieo with fine interference skirted around right end and when about to be thrown out of bounds reversed his field and counted without any trouble at all. Angelo's kick for the extra point was blocked.

The Purple and Gold lead was short-lived however, for the Maroons immediately came back at the opening of the second quarter and deadlocked the score. It again happened on a blocked punt. St. Ann's was given the pigskin on their own twenty yard line. Quici tried a reverse and was thrown for a ten yard loss. The "Saints" then attempted to punt out of danger, but Conboy broke through and blocked the kick which fell into the waiting arms of Gotta who just took two steps and was over the goal line. Ambler's try for the extra point was blocked by Tershon.

It was not until the final quarter that the Bristol boys managed to score the touchdown which netted them victory. The "Saints" worked the ball from midfield to the twenty-six yard line. Here Dick Seneca was rushed into the game and on the first play he went right through center and before he could be stopped was across the final chalk mark. Pieo scored the extra point on an end run.

The "Saints" outplayed the losers, tallying fifteen first downs to the Roxborough's four. The St. Ann's defense, although weaker than any time this season because of the absence of four players, held up wonderfully which was a big help in bringing the St. Ann's log to four victories and four defeats.

On next Sunday on Sullivan's field, the St. Ann's team will play a benefit game for the Harriman Hospital.

White Elephants Prevail In A Furious Combat

(By "Sid" Popkin)

Striving to play off their rivalry on the New Edgely field yesterday, Bristol White Elephants and the Edgely blacksmiths fought four thrilling periods to have the final score favor the Bristol Gladiators by a score of 7-0.

Although Edgely had the 210-pound coach of Bensalem in the backfield and also the ex-coach of Falls Township, and the principal of Edgely schools, on the line, they could make no headway through the impregnable line of the White Elephants.

During the first half both teams splattered up and down the field displaying football that thrilled the large crowd. Three times the Elephants got within the Blacksmiths' 15 yard line but failed to score.

The second half opened with a beautiful kick made by Spencer only to be called back for an off-sides. Spencer again kicked, which brought the ball through the air to almost the same spot as the former. Although many beautiful plays were called on the part of both teams the score still remained 0-0 at the end of the third quarter.

The fourth quarter opened in which Spencer started. A penalty for talking put the ball on the White Elephants' 25 yard line. With superb playing they carried the ball to their opponents five yard line without a single loss. Three times the Elephants tried to back the line but gained not a single foot. The fourth and last trial Spencer received the ball and on an end run with exceptional interference finally crossed the final chalk line for the first tally. Edgely Sullivan dropped the ball right over the plumb center of the goal posts.

After this touchdown the Edgely team had a new kind of football to contend with. Puss Marshall, of the Elephants, bucked the line for large gains but failed to score again.

Next week the White Elephants will play Princeton A. A. at Mayfair.

and men's meetings. We found that if we could secure the interest of one of the men that we had gone a long way toward helping the entire family. The men's meetings have grown tremendously. Starting with 11 men, the group now numbers about 100. The Sunday School is quite large, and there are classes for all ages. "I cannot give the Needlework Guild women too much praise for the garments they send us, for that helps much in our work."

Mrs. Ketchum who has been "50 years in the harness," is nearly 73 years of age. It was remarked by the speaker that the first consideration this Christmas at their center is to be providing of food, then clothing. "But we would like to be able to give some small toys to the children who are hoping Santa will not forget them."

The Junior Guild members marched to the platform early in the program, bearing their baby basket layettes for which they made and collected garments. They then sang "Raise the Song of Junior Guild."

The Cornwells Guild has 17 directors; and the juniors are in charge of Mrs. C. B. White, assisted by Mrs. Sebastian Kueny. Each of the 12 baskets provided by the juniors this year contained 30 garments.

This guild, which is headed by Mrs. F. A. Simons, has for its other officers: Vice-president, Mrs. William Voorhies; secretary, Mrs. William Simons; treasurer, Mrs. Herman Becker. Several sewing meetings are held throughout the year at the homes of the directors. At a luncheon recently $27.62 was netted, and this added to money in the members' mite-boxes, and a gift of $1 from each director provided funds to buy some clothing. Garments purchased totalled 426. The sewing committee made 110 articles. It is believed that the total this year will surpass the 1614 exhibited last year.

Chesterfields are Milder
Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."
